“The true Grande Dame of Amsterdam”

HERITAGE

The true Grande Dame of Amsterdam. The majestic building, in the French renaissance style of the 16th and 17th century, was the vision of Samuel Sarphati, a 19th century physician whose influence in the city goes well beyond medicine. In 1847, Sarphati became involved in politics as a project developer in city planning and The Amstel Hotel was his passion project to usher Amsterdam into a new era of architectural sophistication. He commissioned architect Cornelis Outshoorn to design the building along the banks of the Amstel River.

Sadly, Sarphati never saw his vision come to fruition as he died the year before the hotel was opened.

Since its opening in 1867, the Amstel Hotel in Amsterdam has been known for its majestic appearance and homely atmosphere, with an imposing lobby, historic staircase, enchanting chandeliers and high ceilings.

EVENTS AT THE AMSTEL

SPIEGELZAAL

The Spiegelzaal at the Amstel Hotel is the largest and most coveted event space, characterized by its regal decor, high ceilings, and abundant natural daylight. “Spiegel”, meaning “mirror”, is how the space received its name as mirrors adorn the walls, creating a timeless and elegant ambiance. With stunning views of both the city and the river, the Spiegelzaal is a perfect choice for weddings, receptions, large dinners, and exhibitions, offering a versatile and enchanting setting for unforgettable events.

TUINZAAL

Connected to the Spiegelzaal, the Tuinzaal at the Amstel Hotel is a seamless extension that adds natural allure to the event space. The hotel, once adorned with a garden - suitably named after the Dutch word for garden, “tuin” - stands distinctively as the sole venue boasting a terrace. Ideal for larger meetings, cocktail receptions, and intimate dinners, this venue boasts a terrace with picturesque views of the Amstel River. The combined use of the Tuinzaal and Spiegelzaal allows for a fluid and spacious experience, perfect for creating unforgettable moments against a backdrop of sophistication and scenic beauty.

STADHOUDERSZAAL

The hotel is situated near the renowned Stadhouderskade (Stadholders Quay), which was named after Stadholders Willem II (1626-1650) and Willem III (1650-1702) in 1872. 1872 marked two hundred years since Stadholder William III liberated the Netherlands from the English and the French in 1672. The quay was previously referred to as Buitensingel.

The Stadhouderszaal at the Amstel Hotel is an intimate and inviting space, characterized by deep red tones and stunning views of the Amstel River. With ample natural daylight and high ceilings, it offers a warm ambiance suitable for various events, from board meetings and workshops to cocktail receptions, lunches, and dinners. Versatile and charming, the Stadhouders ensures a delightful experience for all occasions.
